

NEW DISCOVERY - MARS IDENTIFIES TRANSITIONAL PHASE OF INTERDIMENSIONAL BEING SEEN IN NASA SPIRIT IMAGE

SEATTLE, WA (MARS) September 10, 2009 – Ten days after its discovery was announced by the president of the Mars Anomaly Research Society (MARS), MARS has identified the fact that a Martian humanoid filmed standing literally within feet of NASA's Mars Exploration Rover Spirit is not a biological human but rather an inter-dimensional one that Spirit's camera has caught "morphing" between states.

The Speckled Gremlin: An inter-dimensional being

On September 1st, Andrew D. Basiago, 47, president of MARS, announced that MARS had discovered a new humanoid on the Red Planet that it is calling the "Speckled Gremlin."

The elfin creature, a small hominid with a mottled complexion, was photographed by the rover Spirit on Day 2012 of its Mars mission.

"This is the evidence that we've been looking for," Basiago said. "Here, in consecutive images, we see a sentient life form appearing, and then disappearing, as it walks past Spirit, as a rock or statue would not, proving that Mars is inhabited!"

Andrew D. Basiago

September 1, 2009: MARS publishes its discovery of the Speckled Gremlin

MARS identifies Transitional Phase of ID, page 2

Movement in Time and Space as Evidence of Life

The gremlin was spotted by MARS analyst Ross Curley while searching through images from Spirit found on NASA's archive page at http://marsrover.nasa.gov/gallery/all/spirit_p2012.html. In one photograph (below), the head of the tiny, multi-colored being can be seen as he approaches within feet of the rover.

Day 2012 of NASA's mission to Mars: a Speckled Gremlin approaches Spirit

In a later photo taken at the same location found in the NASA gallery, MARS concluded that the Gremlin had turned its head as it moved past Spirit (below). In fact, the being was caught as it was disappearing.

In a later image, the Speckled Gremlin can be seen becoming invisible in form

MARS identifies Transitional Phase of ID, page 3

Since then, MARS has studied the NASA photo array that contains the images of the Speckled Gremlin and concluded that NASA has photographed something that has never been seen before on film – an inter-dimensional being on another planet in its transitional phase between different states of existence.

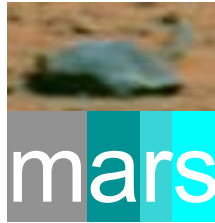

September 10, 2009: MARS finds this intermediate image of the Speckled Gremlin

In the new photograph (below), the eyes, nose, mouth and headpiece of the Speckled Gremlin are still readily visible, but the creature has “morphed,” so that it has an entirely different set of facial features.

Never before seen on film: an inter-dimensional being morphing between states

MARS identifies Transitional Phase of ID, page 4

In this time series analysis featuring three photographs of the Speckled Gremlin (below), the inter-dimensional being can be seen as it morphs between different states of physical existence. In the first image (left), the face of the Speckled Gremlin looks puffy and sad. Its mottled complexion shows a sharp contrast between light and dark banding. In the second image (middle), the gremlin looks like something has startled it, and its features have changed dramatically. Its eyes, previously large and closed, have become small and open, and its face has become much more narrow and lighter, with far less contrast in its complexion. An L-shaped patch of dark skin has begun to form on the right side of its face. In the third image (right), the gremlin's face has almost completely disappeared – poof! – leaving only an irregular L shape, as the inter-dimensional has begun to disappear from view inter-dimensionally.

An inter-dimensional being on Mars seen in transition: Going... Going... Gone!

Basiago stated:

“We can only speculate as to whether this inter-dimensional being appeared and then disappeared from view in this image from NASA’s rover Spirit because the Spirit had alighted on Mars or because the being had delighted in the fact that MARS is using the Spirit’s images from Mars to prove that Mars is inhabited.

“MARS congratulates NASA in taking part in the making of this unprecedented finding in Ufology, one that proves, as reported but never photographed before in the UFO contact literature, that inter-dimensional beings are capable of the kind of phase-shifting between physical states that we see here.

“This finding forever removes what Apollo 11 astronaut Neil Armstrong once referred to as one of truth’s protective layers – the one surrounding such established controversies as whether inter-dimensional beings exist or not and whether they can transition between different states of physical existence.

“Clearly, inter-dimensional beings do exist, for their inter-dimensionality has now been captured on film.”